In 1990, an explosive young band from Aberdeen, Washington came together to record their major label debut at Sound City Studios in Los Angeles. The album reinvents rock music within three weeks of its release.

The classic Neve 1081 mic preamp was there to capture every last scream.

In early 1986, three young rappers from Hollis, Queens came together to record a radical, stripped down collection of raw beats and street-smart rhymes. The album goes on to become a worldwide sensation, selling over 3 million copies and changing the sound of popular music forever.

Neve mic preamps were there to document the sound of revolution.
